TINKER FEDERAL CREDIT UNION MOORE SITE WILL REBUILD AFTER F-5 TORNADO STRIKES

OKLAHOMA CITY – “We will rebuild” is the promise from Tinker Federal Credit Union (TFCU), as personnel continue to scour through what remains of its Moore branch. That facility, located at 400 S.W. 6th Street, was destroyed in the F-5 tornado that hit Moore, Okla. on May 20, 2013.

The safe deposit box vault – the same one that sheltered 14 employees and eight members during the tornado – has been under around-the-clock security since Monday and will continue to be guarded, as TFCU works diligently to arrange for giving members access to their safe deposit boxes.

“We know members are concerned about the contents of their safe deposit boxes that were at the Moore branch,” said TFCU Senior Vice President of Marketing Matthew Stratton. “As soon as we can make them accessible, we will contact those members. We want them to know their personal belongings and papers are being closely guarded.”

TFCU said that, in addition to questions about the safe deposit boxes, the most common question from members who had used the Moore branch has been about where they can conduct their TFCU business in the future. “We have several branches in the general area, as well as a Credit Union Service Center in the same vicinity, where they can continue to take care of their personal financial business,” Stratton said.

Stratton also said the credit union will continue to clean up and clear off the property over the new few weeks so new construction can begin.

Tinker Federal Credit Union is the largest credit union in Oklahoma, with over $3 billion in assets and 275,000 members.
